Boys Seeking Adventure End Up In Tragedy

Last week Jimmy Horras and Donald Bixler, both of Mokena grew tired of school and decided to seek new adventure and they ran into more than anticipated.

They boarded a Rock Island freight train in the Joliet yards and got into a coal car loaded with pipe. The train was bound for Silvis, Ill. While switching in the Silvis yards an extra heavy bump loosened some of the pipe in the car and Jimmy was hit on the back of the head by a piece of pipe, sustaining a basal skull fracture. He and Donald managed to get out of the car and finally wound up at the Public hospital in Moline.

Here the boys told what had happened. The Moline authorities notified the Will County sheriff's office who in turn notified Deputy Sheriff Harold Spiess of Mokena Sunday night and he at once notified Jimmy's mother, Mrs. Philip Provic. The latter and her daughters Mrs. Bernard Cooney and Mrs. Joe Schmitz of Chicago left at once for Moline. At first the hospital attendants had given Jimmy only a fifty fifty chance to live, but he rallied and according to latest reports is on the way to recovery.

The Bixler boy has returned to the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Warming with whom he is making his home. And it is hoped that Jimmy and his mother will be able to return home soon.

A few weeks ago, Chas. Egerton, Jackie Hurley and a lad by the name of Stauffner, all of Mokena, went as far as Kansas City, Mo., via box car, pullman, but they returned home in three days.

It seems there is another young boy in Mokena who has been traveling by himself and who has been regaling the youth of the community with his feats and the fun of bumming about the country. These lads do not stop to realize the worry and trouble they are causing their folks. They don't accomplish a thing by wandering around.

Most of the time these kids meet up with some kind of tragedy.

If young boys will listen to the returning servicemen, they will tell them how good home is.

BROTHERS MEET IN MARSHALL ISLANDS

The first time in two years that Eugene A. Paulsen and his brother T. J. Robert W. Paulsen have met, was recently on Eniwetok Islands.

In order to overcome this infection they shipped him on a hospital ship to the U. S. When the ship stopped at Eniwetok Islands, Robert had his brother called. He came to the boat and did they have a fine visit for three hours. Eugene wrote home that it was the most wonderful thing that has ever happened to him.

Robert has been in the Pacific for 20 months. The boys are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Paulson of Harvey, former New Lenox residents. Their brother in law, Pfc. Robert Barnes who was recently discharged from the service, were former Mokena residents. AMBITIOUS TINLEY PARK BOYS REALIZE DREAM TO OPERATE THRIVING DAIRY BUSINESS.

They say that big trees from little acorns grow and that is the way it has worked out for the Blue Island-Tinley Park Dairy. It was but an idea, at first rather a timid one, but when young Edwin Suhs of Tinley Park conceived the idea of selling and delivering milk direct from the Tinley Park farmers to the milk dealers in Chicago, it proved to be the making of a large substantial business. He was the first one ever to haul milk direct from the farm to a dealer. That was in 1917.

When his business grew he thought he should expand into the home delivery of milk. Then it was he met another ambitious young lad, by the name of Milford Meyer, also of Tinley Park, who had the same idea. They decided to go into business together and on October 4, 1926 started the Blue Island Sanitary Dairy with one case of milk each to deliver each morning.

With hard work and conscientious service their business expanded beyond their fondest dreams, until their Blue Island plant became inadequate to take care of this ever growing business.

They had always admired the Tinley Park Dairy plant, but because of the war and shortage of material they were unable to build. The next best thing was to approach the Tinley Park Dairy owners and see what could be done about consolidating and about four weeks ago the deal was made. Now it is known as the Blue Island-Tinley Park Dairy.

This is a home industry for the territory of Tinley Park, employing and maintaining local people as far as possible. Milk is bought from local farmers who deliver right to the plant near their home.

The aim of this new company is to give the best in quality and service that is possible. They intend to improve their plant by enlarging and installing the latest and most modern equipment attainable, making it the finest plant of this kind in the suburban territory.

The patronage of the Tinley Park people is very much appreciated by their local firm.

Arkie Coming To Frankfort

By vocation, the Arkansas Wood-chopper is a radio entertainer, by avocation a weather prophet, palm reader and dog trainer. Such is the forward for The Arkansas Woodchopper, who is coming to the Frankfort gym on Friday night, Nov. 9.

The Woodchopper, or "Arkie" as he is generally known to radio audiences, is a veteran performer on station WLS Chicago, at present celebrating his fourteenth year as a master of ceremonies, singer and musician.

Arkie is a real man of the soil, having been born in Knobnoster, Missouri, where he learned all about soil, wood chopping and farming before moving to Arkansas to continue the same pursuits. He learned to predict weather conditions by studying from day to day wind directions, temperature changes at sunrise and sunset, signs of the moon etc. He says he had to know such things on a farm, so he learned his prediction and has followed it through as a hobby. Having had his palm read by palm readers galore, and learning something about the art for himself at every reading, he perfected his own method, and is "passable at it".

Arkie, in addition to pinch hitting for other artists, appears on the "Smile a While", "Dinner Bell" and "Merry go Round" programs, and on the National Barn Dance he has a variety of assignments. He sings to his own guitar accompaniment, plays bango and fiddle, calls the square dances, and even indulges in a bit of rustic comedy.

RETURNED MISSIONARY PRESENTS GRAFIC PROGRAM

Virginia Firanzo, a 65 year old native Indian Missionary of Brazil held her listeners spellbound last Sunday evening in the Gertrude Highland Tabernacle in Oak Lawn as she related interesting parts of her life in the deep jungle about 3800 miles inland along the Amazon river, near Santa Caprina in Brazil.

It is so near the equator that the temperature frequently reaches 130-140 degrees in the shade.

Her father was a white Missionary and her mother an Inca princess, her father's first convert among the natives. She was born along the Baltic Sea, the only one among 8 brothers and sisters to be born in Europe, and as such was for many years considered an outcast by her sisters and brothers. She is quite outstanding among the natives since she has a light complexion and blue eyes, while her physical features favor her native mother.

She wore a native costume, hand woven of wood bark, grass and skin in many bright colors each symbolizing something in her tribe. She said previously the natives went naked but the Missionaries have taught them how to make the clothing they are now learning to wear which is made from grasses and bark. They polish their bodies daily with fish oil to keep the millions of insects away.

She received a wonderful education and has travelled extensively as an Opera Prima Donna for 18 years thru-out Europe and has also visited three times in the USA.

As she spoke she showed slides in color of the natives, their grass houses, and where they sleep in grass hammocks 25 feet up in the trees to protect themselves from the jungle beasts.

There are no rationing worries there. Their food consists mainly of meat. 7 To 10 lbs. are consumed daily. They file to their teeth to enable them to eat it raw, and especially like the delicious steaks from the Tapir, a 175 lb. piglike animal that lives near water to protect itself from enemies, the deadly Cobra snake and the tigers that infest these jungles.

They also eat potatoes grown in the clearings, and the root of the Corovaba tree (Tree of Life) which when pounded produces a flour for bread as well as a kind of sweetener. Salt is obtained from the ashes of a tree. Wild

The petition has been filed and Nov. 26th has been set as the date for a hearing on said petition in Will County Court. If the annexation petition is granted then this property will be subdivided and will be known as the Mokena Mineral Spring Farm addition to Mokena.

EVELYN MAE BORMET OF GREEN GARDEN WEDS OAK LAWN SOLDIER

Miss Evelyn Mae Bormet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Bormet of Green Garden became the bride of T. Sgt. Herbert Wegner, son of Peter Wegner of Oak Lawn, at a pretty wedding solemnized Saturday afternoon at three thirty o'clock at the North Peotone Evangelical and Reformed church with the pastor, the Rev. Carl Schrupp, officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a gown of white satin and mouseline de soie. Her finger tip veil was held in place with a flowered headband. She carried an arm bouquet of white roses and gardenias and wore a pearl necklace, the gift of the groom.

Miss Jean Bormet was her sister's maid of honor, and wore a gown of orchid taffeta with a net overskirt. The bride's maid was Miss Viola Wegner, sister of the bridegroom. Her aqua taffeta gown was fashioned identically as the maid of honor's. Both wore flowered head bands and carried mixed bouquets of roses and carnations.

Lester Wegner served his brother as best man and Vernon Bormet was groomsmen. Ushers were Edwin Bormet Jr. and Russel Wegner. Mrs. Earl Ulrich was the pianist and played a group of appropriate selections preceding the ceremony. She also accompanied Miss Alice Kochel, who sang "I Love You Truly" and Always. The traditional wedding march and recessional were played.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served to about 50 guests at the Walter Wegner home at Oak Lawn and later a reception was held at Iolea Pavilion, Oak Lawn, where 200 guests enjoyed dancing. Sgt. Wegner, who had been wounded in the European theatre of war, will report to Camp Grant after a 45 day furlough. The young couple left on a short trip.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lt. Andy Blake, assigned to Operations, was agreeably surprised by the arrival of his wife, Arab, who had come to Washington to take a job with Ordnance. On the bus while looking for living quarters for Arab, she said she was going to write down all of the loose talk taking place on the bus. While she was in the act she was noticed and the cry of "Spy" rang out. Arab and Andy were able to jump off the bus, but in following her Andy tripped and passed out. When he came to the FBI questioned him, and he told all about Arab's work, and that she had been mistaken for a spy. Andy was told to be sure that Arab did not interfere, but rather to report to FBI in the future.

CHAPTER III

"Andy! Please, Andy. You've got to help me. You—"

I jammed my foot on the starter. "Am I? You aren't staying here." She wrenched out of my grip, flung open the car door, and jumped to the sidewalk. She turned for a moment. "And if you won't help," she choked, "I'll do it alone." Her heels clattered on the walk and up the curved steps and then the door opened and she was gone.

I sat there in the car. I sat there doing nothing. I wish I could even claim that dozens of reckless plans boiled through my head. Only one plan went through my head, and it limped through. I wanted to call a cop. That, of course, might be the very worst thing to do. It would identify Arab publicly as the girl in the white raincoat without solving any of the mystery.

Probably I would have waited there until arrested for overtime parking if the problem hadn't been decided for me. The door of the Q Street house opened and a rugged-looking guy came out. He was tall and had shoulders which crowded the doorway. He eased himself down the steps and came, limping slightly, to my car.

"A guy wants to see you outside, Jack," he said.

"I don't get it," I said. "What's the idea?"

He drawled, "Are you coming out nice, or do I dig for you?" I wasn't happy. The Army likes its officers to stay out of trouble, and has a few dozen regulations to that effect. You can get a court for a street brawl. But this case seemed to call for taking a chance. I shuffled off my blouse and cap, so that I wouldn't be wearing any insignia, and started to get out of the car on his side.

That was a mistake. I was only half out when he hit me. My head bounced off the door frame and got caught in a cross-rip of short hooks. It felt like having my head rattled in a giant dice box. Galahad was smiling. He could have dropped me with a real punch but he didn't try. He seemed to be having fun. I got a foot up against his ribs and shoved hard. He staggered back and fell in the hedge and I had a chance to scramble out.

There wasn't time to clear my head. The big boy came off the hedge like a fighter using the ropes, and rushed me.

Then, instead of dropping off to sleep, I found my head clearing. I had been doing a little instinctive work on his groceries and he didn't like it. He was trying to push me away. That was swell. I got a good flat-footed stance and threw hooks at his middle as fast as I could. He was tough. It was like hitting an underinflated tire. He would take a lot of softening. He— I looked down, blinking. The guy had wilted. He was down. But he wasn't writhing slowly the way a man does when you really get to his groceries. He was sitting down, holding his right knee.

"Get up," I snapped.

"Go to hell."

"Buddy," I said, "if you don't get up I'll—"

"What'll you do, kick me? Go on, Jack, kick me. It'll look swell in the sunrise edition. Army Lieutenant Kicks Cripple."

This was getting silly. "You're no cripple."

He yanked up his right trouser leg and said, "There you are, Jack. Bad knee. Jeez, they ought to give you a medal."

He had a brace on the knee but it didn't necessarily mean a thing. I've seen guys with braces like that rack up ten baskets in big-league basketball. "You're just yellow," I said.

A strange voice said, "Joey Raeder only likes fighting when he is winning." It was a harsh voice. It scratched like a bun needle on a phonograph record.

I turned and saw a short fat man. The street light reflected on his glasses and made him look blind. He was so fat that his arms stuck out at angles instead of hanging straight down.

Joey Raeder scrambled to his feet and grabbed the fat man's coat with his left hand. He snarled, "I've been taking that stuff off you ever since I came here. You're gonna learn to keep your mouth shut."

I saw Raeder drop his right shoulder and start a punch and I jumped forward to stop him. I wasn't needed. What happened was almost too fast for me to follow. The fat man's hands made short white blurs against the darkness. Not hitting; slashing. With the edges of his palms. Raeder's arms dropped as if numbed and the edge of a palm clipped under the ear. He crumpled.

The fat man said, "He works for me. He needed this lesson." He moved up close and the blind glasses glared with reflected light. "People think a fat man is a joke. They think he cannot fight or make love or plan." His voice was higher, scratchier. "Perhaps you think so? Perhaps you think so?"

"Take it easy," I said. "I never gave it a thought."

The voice came down a pitch. "Raeder lives in there," he said, tilting his head at the fake embassy. "Take him in. Tell him to report as usual tomorrow."

I picked him up in a fireman's lift and staggered up the steps to the house. The door opened. The next ten minutes were among the worst in my life. The place was filled with excited girls. None of them knew exactly what had happened, except that poor Joey was hurt and that I had done it. As I entered there was a gasp of horror. The way they shrank back I might have been a Jap task force.

It was too much for me. I said brutally, "Where do you girls want the body?"

A lovely little ash-blond South-erner breathed, "Is... is he dead?" "No," I growled. "He swooned. Can I drop him just anywhere?" "Don't you dare drop Joey," one of them cried. "You bring him back here to his room and be careful or we'll call the police!"

The big boy came off the hedge like a fighter.

I carted him to a bedroom-bath combination on the first floor and flopped him on the bed. Half a dozen girls clustered around him, twittering with grief and smoothing his forehead and making him comfortable. I saw his eyelids flicker, but he didn't open them. In his place I'd have done the same.

"If you really want him to move," I said, "call his draft board."

They stormed at me that Joey was a genuine 4-F and had a terribly bad knee from fighting the Nazis in Spain long before persons of my type thought of fighting and he had gone up in a frightfully old plane the Spanish Loyalists had given him and had knocked down five brand-new Messerschmitts and now wasn't I ashamed.

"Not yet," I growled, "on account of the Germans didn't use any Me's in Spain."

A weak voice said, "They got things wrong, Jack. It was Heinkels, and only four. I might of got five but I caught a slug in my knee."

It was Joey, and he was starting to sit up at last. His admirers crowded around him and patted him and told him not to overdo it, but he shook them off bravely.

"Jack," he said, "we still got something to settle."

I said hopefully, "Something we can disagree about?"

A teen-age kid cried, "Now you just leave Joey alone! You knocked him out once."

"Just for the record," I said, "I didn't knock him out. He decided to sit out our waltz, and then his boss came along and they had an argument and his boss rocked him to sleep."

Arab fell into a chair, whooping like an Indian bearing down on palefaces. I stamped out of the room. Luckily it didn't have a revolving door.

As I reached the hallway a cool hand touched mine and a woman said, "Let me fix those cuts before you leave, Lieutenant."

Her face was in a shadow but I could see a slim figure with legs that deserved a triple-A priority on nylon. She wore a tailored suit with a flaring white collar opened one more notch than a really shy girl would have opened it.

"I'm all right," I said. "You better take care of Joey, though. He's just been shot down by a mess of Heinkels. And besides, he's pretty."

"You're not all right," she said. "You have a cut over your left eye and a bloody nose and your vanity is terribly bruised."

"With Joey around," I grumbled, "there isn't any vanity left for anybody else to have."

She laughed softly and patted my hand. "You're a little boy, like most men. But a nice one, I think. Come along. I am Mrs. Fielding and this is my home."

I lumbered down the hall beside her like a small grimy kid with a nice aunt. "If you own this place," I said, "why do you let a guy like Joey Raeder stay here?"

The trim shoulders shrugged. "One needs a man around a house. To take care of the grass and furnace and to open stuck windows and—"

"Yeah," I said, "I bet he's great on opening girls' windows. From which side?"

She opened a door and fumbled for the light switch. "You have no right to say that," she said coldly.

"Sorry."

"Sit down," she said. "Don't worry about the girls coming in and bothering you. Their community room is across the hall."

I sank into a chair and watched her rummage through a closet. I don't have a photographic mind but I never have much trouble remembering a pretty face. And I hadn't forgotten hers. She came back from the closet with some absorbent cotton and Band-Aid and alcohol, and I said softly, "Do you still like those tall glasses of cafe nature and onion soup at Les Halles at six a. m. and the tango and buttered croissants?"

Her eyes widened but she didn't seem very curious. "What would be the use?" she said. "The Germans have Paris."

"I don't want to pry," I said. "Shut me up if you want. But your name was Renee something-or-other and you were a hostess at Zelli's and half the college boys seeing Paris that summer were in love with you. It was August of thirty-one."

She smiled faintly. "You have a good memory."

"Why not? You were Paris and mystery and all that."

"I was seventeen and fresh from a Breton fishing village and nothing more. What else do you remember?"

"I remember we all tried to make you and you laughed and didn't have time for anybody really except a big happy-go-lucky kid from Dartmouth. He was half of one of their terrific pass combinations. He set a new record one night in Harry's New-York Bar for emptying that two-liter beer mug. Something under twenty seconds. What was his name?"

"Bob. Bob Fielding."

She said it so calmly that for a moment I didn't click. "Sure, Fielding," I said. "What happened to him? I don't remember him playing his senior year."

"We were married. He didn't go back."

I kept quiet. I had no right to get curious.

She began dabbing at my face. My throat felt as if somebody had tied a knot in it, and I wouldn't have known the difference if she had used carbolic acid. My scratches didn't seem very important.

I had my throat untangled by the time she finished. I thanked her but she wasn't listening. She tilted my face to the light and studied it. After a few moments I muttered, "You won't remember my face. Nobody does."

She gave a little start. "I'm afraid I wasn't even trying to remember you," she said. "That was not polite of me, was it? I was trying to remember a girl from Brittany."

She rose. I stumbled to my feet and we turned toward the door. And there was Arab. She didn't look angry or suspicious. She looked like a college freshman hauled up before the Dean of Women. Her feet were toeling in and her fingers tightly laced and her eyes wide and fearful. I had never seen Arab frightened, although there had been a few times in the past when it would have been sensible of her.

"I've been fixing your Lieutenant's face," Renee said calmly.

"Oh," Arab said. She sounded relieved, and I wondered if there had been a shade of emphasis when Renee said "your lieutenant." Women make me feel helpless. Sometimes I get the idea that men don't have any choice at all, but just get dealt out by women to each other like cards. From the bottom of the deck, too.

"I know that you two had some misunderstanding," Renee said. "But you ought to forget it and start all over. I think that you will like each other."

"We'll . . ." Arab said.

"I'll come back tomorrow night, if I may," I said.

Arab murmured, "I want to fix up my room tomorrow night, but if it's all right for Lieutenant Blake to help . . ."

When we got out on the porch nobody was around, and I said, "Do I know you well enough yet to kiss you?"

"Well, no. But it's a nice way to get acquainted."

Arab looked at me hopelessly and said, "I've got to go some sleep. Do you mind?"

"I'd better go, anyway," I said. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Tractor Fatalities Can Be Greatly Reduced

If the 1945 farm fatalities with tractors follow the pattern of past years the principal causes of injuries will be: overturning, falling from or being thrown off the tractor, accidents with power take-off shafts, accidents while cranking, and accidents from fire and fumes.

Most of these tragedies can be avoided by following these simple safety rules:

1. Avoid holes or ditches into which a wheel may drop and cause tractors to overturn.
2. Drive slowly—especially over rough ground or near ditches.
3. Reduce speed before making a turn or applying brakes.
4. Never ride on drawbar of tractor or drawn implement.
5. Never permit riders.
6. Do not attempt to make adjustments while the tractor is in motion.
7. Never dismount from tractor while it is in motion.
8. Always stop power take-off before dismounting from tractor.
9. Be sure that all power line shielding is in place.
10. Do not operate a tractor in a closed building or close to inflammable materials.
11. Never refuel tractor while motor is running or extremely hot.
12. Be sure the gear shift lever is in neutral before cranking the engine.

Heavy Losses Marked

Civil War Engagement

In the hotly-contested battle of Gettysburg, July 1, 2 and 3, 1863, General Lee's army of northern Virginia, about 70,000 strong, was defeated by the federal army of the Potomac, composed of about 93,500 men, under General Meade. On July 1 Hill's and Ewell's Confederate corps drove Union troops off Seminary ridge, through Gettysburg and back to Cemetery Ridge, Cemetery hill and Culps hill. The following day Longstreet's corps drove the Union III corps, under Sickles, from an advanced position at the peach orchard back to Cemetery ridge and the Confederate army occupied Seminary ridge. About 3 p. m. on July 3 General Pickett led 15,000 Confederates in a daring charge across the valley between the two ridges, up the slopes of Cemetery ridge into murderous artillery and musket fire, but was forced back in defeat by the Philadelphia brigade. Fewer than 9,000 of Pickett's men got back to Confederate lines and Lee began the withdrawal of his men. Union losses were put at approximately 23,000 while Confederate losses were about 20,450.

New Water Purifier.

A new method of water purification, developed by the Mathieson Alkali Works, for the removal of tastes and odors caused by industrial waste has been described by G. P. Vincent of the Mathieson research and development department at a meeting of the American Chemical society. The water is first treated with chlorine, to kill germs,

U. S. Cotton Faces Strong Foreign Competition

Here are some facts behind the price competition American cotton farmers will face after the war.

Economists of the United States department of agriculture say that at the beginning of the present century American cotton was by far the most important cotton that went to world markets. The only other countries that produced cotton for export were India and Egypt. But that's not true today. The amount of cotton foreign countries produced last year more than equalled the crop of over 12,000,000 bales our farmers raised. Ours was not a bumper cotton crop, but it was slightly over the preceding 10-year average.

India topped the list of other cotton countries with 4,500,000 bales. Three million more came from Brazil. The Russian and Chinese crops ran about 2,500,000 bales each, and the Egyptian crop nearly 1,000,000 bales last year. Mexico and Argentina picked over 500,000 bales apiece. Peru's cotton crop was over 250,000 bales, and lesser crops were grown in British East Africa, the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, the Belgian Congo, Turkey and Burma.

Stocks of cotton in Egypt, India, and Latin America are exceptionally high with a combined total that exceeded the nearly 10,750,000-bale carry-over in the United States at the beginning of the current season. A foreign export surplus of around 13,000,000 bales is available for release on world markets as soon as shipping and other wartime difficulties are overcome.

The economists say more foreign cotton farmers will grow American Upland cotton after the war, because that is the kind of cotton most foreign spinners want. Also, experience has shown that foreign farmers are likely to sell their cotton at a lower price than our cotton farmers are willing to accept.

Serving Chocolate at Weddings Indian Custom

The custom of serving chocolate at wedding receptions in Middle America can be traced to the early Indians of Honduras. In that day when a young man chose the girl of his dreams, he simply sent a matron in his name, bearing gifts of cocoa, a supply sufficient for the initial celebration of—he hoped—the marriage. If the token was accepted, she meant yes! The approaching marriage was announced by the bride's returning his gift with more cocoa, enough this time for two parties—one of which would be held at his home, and the other in the home of her relatives. Thus the question asked Middle Americans "When will you be serving chocolate?" really means "When will you be married?"

Cholera Immunization

Immunization is the most dependable protection against hog cholera, according to U. S. department of agriculture experts. Serum inoculations have cut down losses in recent years, but it is pointed out that all possible precautions should be taken to keep non-immune hogs in lots away from public highways as far as is feasible.

What Hollywood
Star Saw In New Lenox Item

What Mable Hart, a Hollywood Star, and former New Lenox resident, recalled when she read the following news item in the News-Bulletin, a few weeks ago:

"The New Lenox Public school has recently purchased a new sound system for the school and its activities. This system will be given its first public use, when on tonight, Sept. 21, at 8 o'clock a moving picture entitled, 'The Courageous Mr. Penn' will be shown in the school."

Is this a coincidence? New Lenox School has a new sound system for Pictures and I gave the first "Phonograph Concert" in New Lenox school in 1897!

It was the first phonograph in town and the school charged 10c for adults, and 5c for children. I played all of the records we had on hand and the audience drove in from farms, 3 and 4 miles away! The school room (we had no Auditorium) was packed and they had me play the record of "Stars and Stripes Forever" about seventeen times. I can visualize every moment of that memorable event. The phonograph was the Star attraction hit. I was on the platform as "Co-Star" and it was my first experience as an M. C. This is just an episode in my life but I'm wondering if some of you old timers remember that night almost Half a Century ago? And the delicious home made donuts, the chicken sandwiches and coffee which was served after the "show" by the mothers of my school mates?

He's Still a Long Way from Home!

...Yes, the war was no pink tea. With V-J Day many a fighting man was too tired to think. For a long time we're going to have to do a lot of "thinking" and "doing" for the men who have done their part in winning the complete victory.

...That will cost money. There were well over a million casualties during this most destructive of wars. Many of these men will have to have medical care and treatment for a long time to come. Others need guidance before they can return to normal life. Millions of dollars will be needed for this and other rehabilitation work.

...That's why this Victory Loan is so important. It's your chance to prove to your fighting men that they are not forgotten ... that we can never repay them for what they have done.

...Gaze deep into your heart—and remember and act. Victory has brought us tremendous obligations. Every American must do his part in this great task. Right now, our job is to buy more bonds than ever before during the Victory Loan. Buy them in humble gratitude—buy them now.

Things are Snappy Again! Aerla' photos may now be taken in our 6th Service Command Area. AAF Major Gen. David McCoach Jr., Commanding General said the ban was off every thing except shots of the command's few vital military installations. So birdmen, get out those cameras, and get those birdies to clickin'!

Everybody wants to get into the Air! It's been stated that an 18 yr. old civilian dressed himself as a sergeant. He forged Army papers, bumped a high ranking Navy officer off a plane, and took his place in a flight to England. He used similar tactics to fly to Seattle, Los Angeles and Fort Worth.

Recently two boys, described as being "nuts about flying" did something squirrely. They hid in a Valparaiso, Ind iana airport hanger one night. At three AM., they stole a plane for a fifty mile hop. Sniffley, the fifteen year old pilot had done some flying during the summer and made a good landing at the South Bend Airport.

Then, too. You may have heard about the ex-Marine who held up a loan company to raise enough money to fly to his wife. She's the one that probably ended up by being up in the air.

All of the above were caught with their planes down. Which just goes to show that when the flying bug leads you astray, you get your wings clipped!

More People Going up, Prices Going Down: Since air priorities have been curtailed, 25 percent to 50 percent more people are travelling by air. Airline flights often are equal or below the price of first class rail travel. Helen Olsen of United told me they're trying to find out if folks want the present deluxe service, including meals, etc., or just a seat on a plane for three cents a mile or less! Getting more broad minded, Pan American World Airways has filed with the CAB a rate of $495 round trip between New York and London. This flight is now being made twice a week.

Oh Them Golden Bars. Use the term Warrant Officer only in past-tense when addressing Floyd Orrington. He's the CAP Officer who's a whiz at parachute jumping, and has been plenty "on the beam" building Squadron 613-3 Clubhouse at Rubinkam. He's well-earned the title: 2nd Lt. Orrington. I think it's just "Roger" Floyd!

Up in the Clouds About Husband. Fred, Mrs. Gately? Fred Gately is gunning for his commercial license at Rubinkam. Maybe that accounts for the way Mrs. Gately trips down Chicago's Michigan Blvd. oblivious to her shouted name, pedestrians and traffic, while she gazes intently skyward at every speeding plane.

Second Birthday: Bill Jacobs, Rubinkam Airport Manager, his wife Bernice and baby Erlyne went to Franklin, Ill. on a business trip. But they were back in time for Baby Erlyne's birthday cake on the 29th of October. Gosh, even time flies!

X'd out. Flew to Chalmers, Ind., to report to you on the opening of a new airport there. And to get a few words from the scheduled visitor, famous Roscoe Turner. But the field was wet, and closed to planes. X marked the landing circle. Refueled at Rensselaer Airport, Indiana. Its an auxiliary field for the airlines, is very smooth and has lighting facilities (and that's about all). The attendant "went to town" actually to get us gas and a coke.

Bye til next week.

Bob Kiddie, another popular mitt slinger that at present is stationed at Camp Grant with high hopes of getting an overnite pass to be back with his local buddy named Johnny Klein. Klein since entering the Armed Services of Uncle Sam's Army, won the Middleweight title at the Army Camp in Texas. Six bouts and six knock outs, not bad for an exploy boy.

Greetings, to you Ladies and Gentlemen say the Blue Island Drum and Bugle Corps of the Blue Island American Legion, won't you be our guest at a Great Show. Mrs. S. S. Knox

Orland Park, Ill.

Dear Mrs. Knox:

Several weeks ago there was an article in the Orland Herald about my son Barrie Hoyt, age 2½ being in the hospital stricken with Polio. I hadn't known anything of this article until the days to follow, when I received a number of letters, Sorry to hear you're ill, and Get Well cards from my Orland neighbors telling me they had read about it in the Orland Herald and how sorry they were to hear about the baby also that they were praying for him.

I haven't been able to answer all these wonderful new friends as words fail me. After all we are complete strangers to them and yet they found the time to wish us well. There aren't enough words to express what's in my heart and Mr. Hoyt's.

My son came home Monday fully recovered. We thank God and all those grand unseen friends for their prayers. Barrie is well and can walk after a period of 2½ months.

We would appreciate it very much if you'd thank all our unseen friends in your column and let them know our son is home and well. Thank God.

Thanks a million. Now we can continue with our Photographic work with an open heart. Several of our Orland neighbors were a bit disappointed in us because we had to cancel several appointments for portraits on Monday. But when they read why, in the Herald I'm sure they'll rejoice with us. Thanks again for your time. I am,

Sincerely,
Mrs. Mac Hoyt

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, October 28, was:

"PROBATION AFTER DEATH"

The Golden Text was:
"He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved" (Matt. 24: 13).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you . . . And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have . . . Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures. And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day" (John 20: 19; Luke 24: 38, 39, 45, 46).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:

"Knowing that God was the Life of man, Jesus was able to present himself unchanged after the crucifixion. . . . Jesus' unchanged physical condition after what seemed to be death was followed by his exaltation above all material conditions; and this exaltation explained his ascension, and revealed unmistakably a probationary and progressive stage beyond the grave. Jesus was 'the way'; that is, he marked the way for all men" (pp. 555, 46).

Veterans' Administration
Has Capable Leader

General Bradley Has Fatherly Interest in Veterans; Actions Show His Ability to Administer This Big Job

By BAUKHAGE
Commentator and News Analyst

WNU Service, 1616 Eye St., N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

I have just come back from a visit with the father of 15 million. That isn't such a far-fetched figure to use in describing the tall, rangy Missourian, who is in charge of "the biggest business in the world," which is how they describe the Veterans' Administration in Washington.

To call Omar Nelson Bradley "father" of the service men and women isn't stretching it. Ernie Pyle once said: "If I could pick any two men in the world for my father except my own Dad, I would pick General Omar Bradley or General Ike Eisenhower. If I had a son, I would like him to go to Bradley or Ike for advice." Ernie was a pretty keen judge of human nature on the hoof. I thought of that when one of Bradley's co-workers in the Veterans' Administration, who is almost a decade older than the general, said "fatherly" was the way to describe the manner in which he was treated the first time they had a problem to straighten out with the boss.

And then I met the General. I found a weather-beaten, wiry, long-legged soldier, whose eyes twinkled brighter than the four stars on his collar. Fatherly, yes—and I'll have a word about that a little later. But I found out something else. I found out why he ought to be able to run one of the hardest jobs in the government. And I'll admit, right off, it sounds almost too good to be true.

We had been talking about the details of the reorganization of the agency which is now going on and with which General Bradley is minutely familiar. Then I asked him what it was, if anything, in his military training and experience that he could use in his present position.

He said that he thought it was the same with all jobs such as this. And here is the theory on which he works:

"First, build your organization on functional lines. Second, get the right man to head up each function. Third, give him full responsibility to act on his own authority."

How, I inquired, does this fit in with your military experience, having had some of that branch of adventure myself—although running a platoon isn't running an army.

"It's a good deal like the army," he answered. "You have your staff. You have say 20 sections, each with a special function, working under your chief of staff. Sometimes, of course, you group some of the functions, but the organization is along functional lines."

And how, I asked, do you choose the men to head up these various activities? His answer came back without the slightest hesitation.

"I choose a man, first for his ability, second for his loyalty—and I count heavily on the loyalty. Get loyal men of ability and you've gone a long way toward solving your problems in any organization."

That sounded pretty good to me, but what about the present situation where, after all, there is always a Congress on Capitol Hill, a Congress with constituents who have votes and some of whom want jobs. I asked the General, what about politics? He didn't seem worried. He said that he hadn't had any trouble.

"I'm not a politician," he said. "I never intend to run for office." That was all he would say, but here is a story I picked up later at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue.

A certain Congressman got a hot letter from a constituent who had been fired from the Veterans' Administration. No doubt with due cause. He hot-footed it up to the General and spoke, as legislators often do to officials, with considerable vigor.

"I want the man re-hired at once," the Congressman demanded. The General was polite but sorry.

He stood by his decision.

"If you don't, I'll attack you on the floor."

"Go ahead," said Bradley, faintly recalling, I imagine, some of the attacks in Normandy.

"I'll block your bills," said the irate Congressman.

That was a horse of a different color.

"You will?" said the General. "All right, and if you do that, I'll go to the President with my resignation. He'll get that or find a means to stop you." (Period.)

We all knew about the General's war record—in Tunisia, on the Normandy beachhead, among the hedgerows, where he smashed a gateway at St. Lo which made Patton's lightning drive possible. But we didn't know much about the man. Most of us didn't know he was from Missouri and later some of us might have suspected that that was the reason why he was picked, although the President said it was because he wanted a World War II soldier to take care of the wants of World War II veterans. Now we have some other reasons for believing that the choice was predicated on wise advice and is going to prove itself a fortunate one.

On the horse-sense side, it is because Bradley has established a record as an administrator. He proved that in the army and had the acumen to see the chief fault in the veterans' organization and has set out to remedy it.

On the emotional side—well, Ernie Pyle was right.

The trouble with the Veterans' Administration was that it grew so rapidly that it didn't have time to delegate authority. And there was another reason for this. It was built on what seemed a very sound theory. Let's take its services to the veteran. For instance, small hospitals were scattered all over the country, many in little communities where the veteran could get to them easily. But that didn't work out. It was hard to get expert medical men, good service and the latest equipment in the smaller communities and because the regional organization was spread so thin, it was necessary to have a strong hand in Washington. The result was that the grip of that hand was so tight that the whole system was cramped.

Bradley put his finger on the situation (with the help of well-chosen counsel) and reversed the former policy. Now it's "bring the veteran to the hospital." Bring him by rail or plane in an emergency, but bring him to a well-manned, well-equipped center whose size and importance will attract the best there is in medical skill, when he needs specialized care.

Hand in hand with this regional centralization of the medical facilities, the new organization has decentralized the authority. As soon as Bradley looked over the set-up he said:

"This is like having a 150 regiments under one man. In the army that would be unthinkable. We'd break it down into corps and divisions at least."

And so that is what was done.

But first he made a sharp cleavage between the medical organization and the rest of the activities. He created a new office, "Acting Surgeon General of the Veterans' Administration." And he appointed the best man he knew, Major General Paul Ramsey Hawley, who had been chief surgeon for the European theater and did an outstanding job.

And here I wonder if there wasn't one of those important unconscious childhood impressions which helped. Bradley's middle name, Nelson, is for a well-loved family physician. And Bradley's fatherliness is attested to in his interest in the physical welfare of his men. Again and again war correspondents mentioned the fact that his troops would suffer the fewest casualties possible. He has an instinctive understanding of the afflicted.

BARBS... by Baukhage

Mahomet went to the mountain. The Mikado went to MacArthur. This, it seems only fair to say, merely demonstrates the excellent judgment of all parties concerned.

As I look back over a few decades I have enjoyed on this mundane sphere, the only things I regret seem to be the things I missed.

A lot of New Yorkers who had forgotten there were such things had to use stairs during the elevator men's strike. And this did more for the calves than if they'd taken the ceiling price off of veal.

Production of rubber heels is still behind demand. But there are still more of the other kind of heels than we need.

Small Business Aid

The small business division of the U. S. Department of Commerce is taking particular interest in veterans who are returning from the wars with the intention of entering the small business field.

The small business division has given the subject considerable time and thought and now has available for veterans a booklet, "Veterans and Small Business" which answers numerous questions in the minds of the returning soldier.

The booklet covers many facts of the highly competitive small business field and covers subjects such as, "Postwar Plans for GIs"; "Industry's Job to Place Servicemen"; "The GI Bill and Small Business"; "What About These Veterans' Loans?"; "Factors in a GI's Business Success"; "Getting Started in Your Business"; "How Long Can I Stay in Business?"; "Survival Chances of Retail Stores"; "Risk-taking in a Postwar World"; "Training Program for Small Business"; "Marketing Facts On a County Basis"; "Small Town a Most Important Market," and seven other factors or subjects.

These chapters were written by experts and information contained will be invaluable to the veteran contemplating entering the small business field.

These booklets are available to veterans by writing to the "Small Business Division" of the United States Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Questions and Answers

Q. Can a mother who is all alone and in poor health, have a son released from the Army if he has been in since Jan. 25, 1943, and in the South Pacific since June 19, 1943, and has never had a furlough? Mrs. D. W., Greenwood, Wis.

A. The War Department says that the fact the mother is all alone and in poor health would not necessarily bring about the son's release. If the case can be considered a "hardship case" release might be given, but each case must be decided upon its merits and be recommended by the commanding officer. If your son, however, has been in the army since the dates you give, he possibly has enough points for his discharge now, or at least in the very near future. Without points for battle stars or decorations, which count five each, he has approximately 63 points. He is eligible for application for discharge now at 70 points and the number is fixed at 60 points November 1.

Q. My daughter wishes to know whether she will be entitled to services of a doctor and hospitalization benefits when her new baby arrives, if her husband who is now in the navy is discharged under the point system before the baby arrives?—Mrs. W. A. L., Mill Iron, Mont.

A. The Navy Department says that if she is now receiving navy medical care to which she is entitled, the navy will do everything it can to help her provided she does not move from the area where she is under treatment and the pregnancy is in the later stages. Suggest she contact the nearest navy hospital or dispensary for specific information.

Q. Is there a course of study in fire fighting listed in the educational program for veterans and are there any books available on this subject?—G. E. D., Philadelphia.

A. Many schools approved by State Boards of Education have instructions in fire fighting. For instance, the University of Maryland, College Park, Md., and Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., have such a course. It may be possible that the University of Pennsylvania has such a course. Suggest that you write one of these schools.

Q. Will a soldier who has been in service for two years and 11 months in the States and 13 months overseas receive mustering-out pay if he is given a dependency discharge?—Wife, Treloar, Mo.

A. The War Department says that if his dependency discharge is honorable he is entitled to mustering-out pay.

Q. Please advise if an ex-serviceman can obtain a loan to join up in an open shop in one or more unions?—J. C., Coffeyville, Miss.

A. Can find no regulation which provides for a loan to join a union.

Avoid Stickiness

Before melting chocolate in a dish over hot water, rub inside of dish with melted butter or olive oil to prevent sticking. Measuring cups may be greased in the same manner before measuring molasses or syrup.

Lifts Bed

An electrically-operated hospital bed has been invented. It raises and lowers with the flick of a switch. The use of a nurse or hospital aide is eliminated.

Operators Advised to Use
DDT Killer With Care

No one can be too careful in applying DDT, the insect-killing chemical which is attracting so much attention. When the material is used in barns, poultry houses, and similar places, all feed should be removed so that it will not become contaminated. He reminds that all drinking cups and salt licks should be covered while the DDT is being applied. The spray must be allowed to dry thoroughly before animals are permitted to return to the premises.

Operators applying DDT spray or dust are urged to avoid getting any more of the material on themselves than is absolutely necessary and the same precaution applies to inhaling the material. Operators should be especially careful with DDT and oil mixtures because the oil penetrates the skin of humans much more readily than water and, therefore, is much more dangerous to handle.

General use of DDT is not advised because there still is considerable research work to be done on insects and crops. It has been used safely as a spray for fly, bedbug, louse and roach control in dairy barns and poultry houses, as a spray in combination with bordeaux mixture for the control of flea beetles and leafhoppers on potatoes, and as a spray or dust under certain conditions for various household insects.

Biological Desert

A virgin forest has been called a biological desert because it does not produce enough feed to support animal life in abundance.

Deep Rooted Plants Aid Soil

Plants that root deep, including trees and some grasses, are important agents in enriching the surface soil, the department of agriculture has found. The deep-ranging roots draw from the deeper layers of the soil the various plant nutrients, particularly minerals. When the plant dies and decays these are returned to the soil, but are concentrated in the top layers where shallow-rooting plants can draw on them.

Washing Egg-Beater

Avoid putting the cogs of the egg beater in water. Rinse the spokes under cold water first, then wash only the spokes with your dishes.

Cloudless Skies
When Australia starts developing its infant film industry and decides to build a counterpart of Hollywood, it won't be able to set it up in central Australia. The weather's too dry there for film-making. Clouds needed for essential pictorial effects in the cattle-droving epic, "The Overlanders" were so rare that on one occasion they had to race 60 miles across a tableland to catch up with a herd of cattle and photograph them while the thin, fleeting clouds were still around.

Lean Fish
If lean fish is used for broiling or baking, brush generously with fat or french dressing.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

A man's social position in Java is said to be determined by the number of spare tires he carries on his car. The more spares, the greater the owner's prestige among the natives.

Fliers can breathe easily at altitudes of 80,000 feet in a pressurized strato-suit developed by B. F. Goodrich.

If one wants to open a tire store in Amsterdam, Holland, he must pass an examination demonstrating his proficiency as a bookkeeper and an executive.

B. F. Goodrich made and sold the first tires containing synthetic rubber in June, 1940.

Youngsters' Party Delight—Ice Cream Clowns
(See Recipe Below)

Children's Party

How long since the youngsters had a party of their own? It doesn't have to be birthday time to celebrate, because parties for the younger set are fun to have, and essential for developing social poise.

Parties like this are easy on mother because refreshments must necessarily be simple. A little imagination and flair for decoration will do the rest.

Good wholesome food prepared attractively will go a long way toward satisfying the little guests. Add a few gay tablecloths and napkins, some easy but exciting games and you have all the ingredients for a successful party.

If you are serving sandwiches, cut them into shapes with animal cutters. A cool glass of milk, or hot chocolate with a frothy blob of whipped cream—now returned to the grocery shelves—will bring forth cheers from Jimmy's or Joan's friends.

The favorite dessert is cake or cookies with ice cream of course! Anything you can do to make this latter partyfied will all be on the credit side of the party.

Now that cheese and meat are easier to obtain, you can again have fun with sandwiches. Not too much seasoning, though, because youngsters' stomachs are sensitive. Here are some good suggestions:

Bologna Filling.
(Makes 15 to 20 sandwiches)
1 pound bologna
½ cup chopped pickles or relish
1 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon minced onion
Dash of tabasco sauce
3 hard-cooked eggs
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup ground raw carrots
½ cup chopped celery
Grind bologna and mix thoroughly with relish, mayonnaise, onion and sauce. Divide in half and to one part add 3 hard-cooked eggs, chopped, and ½ teaspoon salt. To the other half add the carrots and celery.

Deviled Egg Filling.
4 hard-cooked eggs
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
4 teaspoons vinegar
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
4 tablespoons mayonnaise
Chop the eggs fine. Add other ingredients and mix well.

Deviled Cheese Filling.
½ pound mild cream cheese
1 small onion
3 canned pimientos or chopped green or red peppers
3 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika
4 tablespoons mayonnaise

Lynn Says:

Don't Ration Eye Appeal:
Foods that look their best usually taste the best, too, because they've been cooked and served properly.

When garnishing daily dinner and luncheon platters, simplicity is the theme. A few freshened carrot tops, lettuce leaves, strips of green pepper or tomato wedges make the difference between the family's liking the food and merely eating it quietly.

Candles, simple flowers or a bowl of fruit add to the table immensely. They even seem to make the food more palatable. Serve meat balls and chops on a bed of watercress and watch the difference.

Or, cut grapefruit rind into fancy shapes with a cutter and set them against a background of green.

Children's Party Menu.

Grind the cheese, onion and pimiento. Add the eggs, seasoning and mayonnaise. Mix thoroughly.

Fruit salads, which contain well-liked fruits, are a nice contrast to sandwiches at children's parties. This one will be high in favor:

Orange, Pineapple and Apple Salad.
(Serves 6 to 8)

3 oranges, peeled and diced
3 slices canned pineapple or 1 cup tidbits
1 unpeeled red apple, diced
1 cup seeded grapes, slivered
½ cup pitted dates, cut in small pieces
½ cup mayonnaise
Mix fruit with mayonnaise and chill very thoroughly. Serve on shredded lettuce.

During the cooler weather, it is often advisable to have a hot dish for the youngsters to start things off right. Now that cheese is again available, it might be a good idea to serve the following spaghetti dish:

Creamy Spaghetti.
(Serves 6)
4 tablespoons butter or fat
4 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
2 cups milk
½ cup grated American cheese
½ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped pimiento
3 chopped hard-cooked eggs
2 cups cooked spaghetti (½ pound uncooked)

Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, salt and pepper. Blend in milk, cheese, pepper and pimiento. Add eggs and spaghetti. Pour into a greased baking dish and bake 35 minutes in a moderate (325-degree) oven. Turn onto a hot serving platter and garnish with chopped stuffed olives or pickles.

Simple foods made to look pretty are a big hit at any party and doubly so if the foods are ice cream and cookies. In this dessert to top off the festivities, a plain cookie forms the ruff of the clown's suit, a ball of ice cream makes the clown's hat.

Ice Cream Clowns.
(Serves 6)

6 large cookies
1 quart vanilla ice cream
6 cones
Seedless raisins
Candied or maraschino cherries
Arrange cookies on a large plate. In center of each place a ball of ice cream. Top each ice cream ball with an inverted ice cream cone. Decorate each ball with raisin eyes and cherry nose and mouth.

Vegetable Dinner.
Remove the leaves from the cauliflower and cut off any bruised or dirty spots. Place it, top downward, in a deep bowl of cold salted water and allow it to stay there about half an hour to draw out dust and other impurities. Cook it whole in boiling water, uncovered. Cook 15-25 minutes until tender. Add about ½ cup milk to the water in which it is boiled—it will keep the cauliflower white. Lift out the cauliflower carefully and allow it to drain in a warm place.

Scrape the two small bunches of carrots, dice them and add them to briskly boiling water. Salt them and boil them until tender—about 10-12 minutes. Drain and butter.

THE CHURCH AS A FELLOWSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Romans 12:3-18.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be kindly affectioned one to another . . . in honor preferring one another.—Romans 12:10.

The greatest and most important institution in the world is the Church. The home, which we have been studying in recent weeks, is the primary unit of society, but its relationships are primarily of a personal nature. In the church there is an organized fellowship within a God-made institution, the living organism through which the Lord brings such blessing to the world—the Church.

Here, in God's house, among God's people, the believer finds strength and joy. The Lord's people are:

I. Different Yet United (vv. 3-8).
God is not interested in uniformity, but He does want unity. In the Church are all types of gifts and personalities, each one useful to God. He does not want them all reduced to that drab uniformity which characterizes so many man-made products.

Prophecy, ministry, teaching, giving, ruling—yes, all the various works to which God calls men should be done diligently for His glory. No man is to think of himself as more or less useful to God. His work is different, but it is God's work, and when all serve as they should there is unity and efficiency in the accomplishing of His blessed purpose.

The unity of believers in Christ (v. 5) is something which needs emphasis in our day. The forces of Protestantism are so divided as to be largely ineffective in many important fields.

Not only are they divided but there are almost endless divisions within denominations—yes, and even in local churches. Sometimes there are issues which cannot be met except by separation, but there are also many unnecessary divisions, dishonoring to God and weakening to the Church.

Let's remember we can be different (God wants us to be!) but we can still be united! God wants that, too!

II. Active Yet Kind (vv. 9-11).
God puts no premium on laziness or indifference. We are not to be "slothful," but "fervent" in spirit. Sometimes one feels that the Church has gone sound asleep. It is alive but inactive. It professes to have a zeal for God, but if there is any fervency of spirit, in most places it must be well hidden. But that is not possible, is it?

How much we need a stirring revival in the Church to bring the people of God into active service for Him. If your church as a whole does not respond to the Lord's Word, why do you not as an individual ask God to rekindle His fire in your heart?

There is to be a humility (v. 10), a fine cleanness of thought and life (v. 9), an unfeigned love for the brethren (v. 9), along with all the fervency of spirit and zeal for service.

There is much talk of uniting Christendom and no little danger of compromise for the sake of an outward unity. Such schemes are destined to failure, but unity in Christ, which recognizes Him as the divine Head of the Church, that we do desperately need and should seek for His glory, for the good of the Church and for the blessing of a world lost in sin and strife.

III. Troubled Yet Peaceful (vv. 12-18).

The Church of Christ is in the world to witness for and to serve Him. Hence, it must face all the persecutions and trials which an unbelieving world will bring upon it. Christians are not exempt from the troubles and sorrows common to all mankind.

Therein we find one of the great opportunities for effective witness, for as the Christian and the Church rightly meet such difficulties, they testify to the grace of God which can give peace in one's heart in the midst of turmoil and distress.

Read the verses. Persecuted, but not embittered thereby; weeping but also rejoicing; meeting evil with good and crookedness with honesty; meeting pride with humility and division with unity; yes, living at peace (as far as it is possible) in a belligerent world.

There is something essentially fine and noble and inspiring about the Christian Church wherever and whenever it lives up to the Lord's purpose for it and its members. There is something dismal and discouraging about the Church when it fails the Lord and His mighty cause.

Some feel that the Church is in just such a state of failure and impotence in our day. If it is true of your church, why not pray and work for a revival which will sweep all the deadness out and bring in a new refreshing breath of power from the very throne of God? Do it now!

Tarragon Vinegar
Tarragon vinegar is a favorite in dressing summer salads. The dark green leaves of tarragon are used for seasoning the vinegar. They are used both fresh and dried. This herb needs a little covering of litter and leaves for winter protection.

Cage Crickets
In the Orient the chirping noise of the house cricket is highly appreciated and many households keep them in cages, the cages often elaborately wrought and decorated.

Two-Headed Stream
The Rhine river rises as a two-headed stream in southern Switzerland, enters the Boden See (Lake Constance), and emerges to continue its winding 850-mile course to its multi-mouthed outlet in the North sea. In its oceanward journey it picks up several important tributaries, such as the Lahn, the Neckar, the Main, and the Ruhr from the east, and the Mosel from the west. In some stretches the river is an international boundary. It is a frontier between Switzerland and tiny Liechtenstein, between Switzerland and the old Austria, between Switzerland and Germany, and between France and Germany. Through Germany the river flows in a general northwesterly direction, turning sharply west at the Netherlands line to enter the North sea.

Freshen Grass With Fertilizer in Fall

Late August or September is the best season to give lawn grass a "lift." After the hard summer season, some refreshments in the way of fertilizer, and possibly lime, is called for. Thin stands of grass are particularly in need of help. If your lawn has not been limed in the last few years, it is suggested that you apply 50 to 75 pounds of ground limestone per 1,000 square feet. This will sweeten the soil and make it possible for the grasses to respond better to fertilizer treatment.

The addition of 10 to 20 pounds of fertilizer per 1,000 square feet of lawn will do wonders. Fertilizers such as 5-10-5, 4-12-8 or those of similar ratios are well adapted for thickening lawn grasses. Uniform distribution can be obtained by spreading the material in two directions. Measure out half of the fertilizer needed for the lawn and spread it in a north-south direction. Then spread the other half in an east-west direction, and there should be little difficulty in getting even coverage.

Lawns given a tonic in the manner described soon will assume a good healthy color and develop a dense stand of grass. Lawns composed of dense turf will resist invasion by undesirable weeds such as crabgrass, buckhorn and dandelion.

Combustionable Hay
Experienced farmers know that hay, if incompletely cured at time of storage—meaning that it has a moisture content of 25 to 30 per cent—is subject to spontaneous combustion.

Perk Up Potato Salad
Potato salad will taste better if placed in the refrigerator to chill several hours before serving time. This gives the onions and seasonings a chance to permeate the salad, making it uniformly delicious.

Trail-Makers
The first trail-makers in America were buffaloes.

To Get Better Cough Syrup, Mix It at Home

So Easy! No Cooking. Real Saving.
To get quick relief from coughs due to colds, you should make sure by mixing your own cough syrup at home. It's no trouble at all, and you know it's pure and good. It needs no cooking, and it's so easy to make that a child could do it.

From your druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add enough plain syrup to fill up the pint. To make syrup, stir two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, if desired. The full pint thus made should last a family a long time, and gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money. It never spoils, and children love its pleasant taste.

And for quick results, you've never seen its superior. It seems to take hold instantly, loosening the phlegm, soothing the irritated membranes, and helping to clear the air passages. Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for quick action on throat and bronchial irritations. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.
